Flying To Norway Grounded In Burma A Hudson Pilot In World War Ii

This is the autobiography of a young man who joined the RAF just before WWII and was commissioned after he received his wings. He was in Burma at the end of WWII as a squadron leader and ordnance specialist. His operational and combat flying was with Coastal Command in Ansons and Hudsons until he was grounded for medical and psychological reasons. So far, so boring, one might think, but in fact this is a very good book about the RAF, in spite of the absence of any great drama. The author ...
