Hence her thesis about Norman power being established through predatory kinship, a kinship organized by and for the Dukes, supported by a number of powerful and closely associated families of warlords. This predatory kinship was relatively unstable and took time to build up and organize, as the author shows. It also relied on imposing peace within the Duchy, and predation outside it and, finally, its roots are part of the "Scandinavian" heritage of the Normans, much more than they are ...

Poppa of Bayeux (French: [p?pa d(?) b?j?]; born c. 880 AD), was the Christian wife or mistress (perhaps more danico) of the Viking conqueror Rollo. She was the mother of William I Longsword, Gerloc and grandmother of Richard the Fearless, who forged the Duchy of Normandy into a great fief of medieval France. Dudo of Saint-Quentin, in his panegyric of the Norman dukes, describes her as the ...

Life. Richard succeeded his father as Duke of Normandy in 996. During his minority, the first five years of his reign, his regent was Count Rodulf of Ivry, his uncle, who wielded the power and put down a peasant insurrection at the beginning of Richard's reign.. Richard had deep religious interests and found he had much in common with Robert II of France, who he helped militarily against the ...

Richard I of Normandy (933–996), also known as Richard the Fearless (French, Sans Peur), was the "Duke of Normandy" from 942 to 996. Richard made Normandy into a feudal society where he owned all the land. His followers held on to the lands given them by remaining loyal to him. He made Normandy a much stronger a power in western France.

William Longsword attacked Flanders in 939 and Arnulf I, Count of Flanders, and Louis IV, King of France, attacked Normandy because of this. Arnulf captured the castle of Montreuil-sur-Mer defeating Herluin, Count of Ponthieu. Herluin helped William Longsword to take back the castle. William was excommunicated for attacking and destroying lands belonging to Arnulf.
